Exposing Critical Race Theory (CRT) as Dangerous is a Winning Strategy for Conservatives/Republicans

With over 58% of all American voters having an unfavorable view of Critical Race Theory (CRT) <sup>1</sup>, it is to the advantage of conservative and Republican candidates to go on the attack and expose the subversive, toxic, and dangerous teachings of CRT.

CRT is shorthand for a process by which children are taught in our schools to portray all white people as evil, blaming anyone with light skin for "slavery" and "the oppression and discrimination of Indigenous, Black, Brown, and other peoples of color."

As such, the Left's solution is called equity, which translates to turning over the reins of power and decision making to anyone not white despite the lack of qualification and experience.

CRT doesn't teach about American exceptionalism or how America has struggled to build a color-blind society, save the world from tyrants, and offers the world's best opportunity to be successful and respected through hard work and law-abiding behavior.

Instead, it shames our children who have no guilt, no investment in past atrocities, no responsibility for their classmates of color's mistreatment, and demands they apologize.

The punishment for failure to accept CRT is not only being labeled racist, but official disciplinary actions such as detention, suspension, or the requirement to attend reeducation classes or "restorative justice" sessions are becoming mandatory.

That's why parents across America are standing up against CRT being taught in our schools and so should conservative and Republican candidates.

Here are some tools and resources to use and forward to family, friends, neighbors, coworkers, and others to educate voters about the dangers of CRT and to urge conservative and Republican candidates to go on the attack to stop CRT from being taught in our schools:
